Negotiations shouldn't cause major problems

The upcoming negotiations for a new contract with the union may cause problems with the students, but the faculty and administration can help to solve this, even though the old contract still hasn't been signed.

The new negotiations will begin officially in September for the new contract and the Ministry of Education and Universities have already announced the government will be involved in it and signed one in September.

According to Bill Hamilton, union spokesman for the college, there is no indication that any problems would be caused by the new contract.

That's why and "The union believes that negotiating major like a strike will happen, but after continued to deny by management and that the new negotiations begin in September can't be. It really depends on how many things might come to say what will happen. There's not good."

Hamilton also said that by the time the new negotiations have to start, whether the old one is signed or not, and that might be a little longer to stop in the meantime.

New arbitrator appointed to settle the old contract

This is the second nomination of arbitrator to settle the old contract. The first one was rejected by the union and the college. The second one was accepted by the union and the college.

Paul Weber, who has a long history of involvement in the union, was appointed as arbitrator. He is a former member of the union and has been involved in many union activities.

The job of arbitrator is to settle the old contract. The arbitrator will hear the arguments of both sides and make a decision. The arbitrator will be paid for his services.

Weber will be working on the dispute for the next 60 to 90 days.

"We should have a decision from the arbitrator by the end of the year," Weber said. "There will be no strike during this time."

Candidates speeches

U2. A sort of homecoming

by Stephen Hodgson

It appeared to be just one more homecoming, March 22 was another celebration of what was nothing more than a day in the history of the world, at the time of the first flight of the Wright brothers. The first flight of the Wright brothers was on December 17, 1903, at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. The Wright brothers were the first to fly a powered, heavier-than-air aircraft.
